Large merchants may have to pay 'reasonable' fee on UPI payments

From the long-term perspective, a reasonable charge, not on the small merchants but the larger ones, will come. I don't know when it will come. It may be one, two, or three years down the line," he said, while speaking at an event organised by the Bombay Chartered Accountants' Society (BCAS) in Mumbai.

“From the long-term perspective, a reasonable charge, not on the small merchants but the larger ones, will come. I don't know when it will come. Digi currency transactions top 1 mn a day

Last year, NPCI introduced interchange fee on prepaid payment instruments (PPI)-based merchant transactions through UPI, where the PPI user has to be paid the interchange fee of up to 1.4 per cent if the transaction value is over ₹2,000, depending on the type of merchant.

NPCI clarified that the fee was only pertaining to PPI-based merchant transactions on UPI and the basic UPI transactions remain completely free. 99.99 per cent UPI transactions continue to be free.

Asbe said investments will be key to reap in another set of users under the digital payments mode while emphasizing that the country has an opportunity to grow ten times in the digital payments space.

"There are 300-500 million people who will come into the financial services mode along with two or three times the existing merchants. To get them within the circle of digital services, somebody has to invest in it. Serious amount of investment will be required," he said.

he added. Asbe reasoned that a merchant discount rate (MDR) or a transaction fee is currently not in place as it is one of the ways to enhance UPI's coverage, and minimize resistance to technology.

"While the charges have been made zero to ensure that the ecosystem adapts this wholeheartedly, there is not the slightest resistance from the ecosystem. The government has been kind enough to provide incentives to the UPI ecosystem," he said. Meanwhile, he acknowledged that the threat from frauds arising out of the breach of cybersecurity is a

A charge on UPI has been a contentious issue, with murmurs from the industry to introduce such charges. At present, the government compensates players in the ecosystem for such transactions, which helps in the broader formalisation aim. Asbe said there has not been the "smallest of resistance"
